Criteria: ☐ A ☐ B ☐ C ☐ D Considerations: ☐ A ☐ B ☐ C ☐ D ☐ E ☐ F ☐ G ☐ None

Justification for decision: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map)

Based on available information, the Robert Edelen House, located at 3606 Accokeek Road near Waldorf, is not individually eligible for the National Register of Historic Places. The two-story, frame building with gable roof dates to the early nineteenth century. Its very deteriorated condition and numerous alterations have eroded the building's architectural integrity. Thus the house does not meet Criterion C for architecture. The house also has no association with significant persons or events and thus does not meet Criteria A or B. Finally, the house is not located within any known historic district.

Documentation on the property/district is presented in: Maryland Inventory

PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY
HISTORIC SITE SUMMARY SHEET

Survey #: P.G. #84-16 Building Date: early 19th c.

Building Name: Robert Edelen House

Location: 3606 Accokeek Road, Waldorf, Maryland

Private & Public/Agricultural/Unoccupied/Deteriorated/Inaccessible

Description

The Edelen house is a two-part gable-roofed frame house. The main block is two-bays wide, with entrance in the second bay of the main south facade. A one-story porch which once spanned this south facade has collapsed, obscuring the front door and preventing close inspection. There is a heavy exterior corbelled brick chimney at the west gable end with prominent weatherings. The main block is one-room deep, with passage to the east and parlor to the west. The building is covered with white asbestos shingle, and the roof is covered with corrugated tin. Extending east from the east gable end of the main block is a two-story one-bay wing with a slightly lower roofline than that of the main block. Several hundred feet east of the dwelling is a complex of farm buildings. They include a large gable-roof barn with a central crossgable peak in the roof of the main south facade; its framing is board-and-batten, and the roof is of standing seam tin. The barns are in use, but the house, essentially unaltered, is deteriorated probably beyond repair.

Significance

The Robert Edelen farm complex represents a small early nineteenth century plantation. The house appears to be an early nineteenth century vernacular dwelling, of end-hall-and-parlor plan, with a small boxed staircase in the corner of the parlor. This dwelling was expanded by the later addition of a one-room wing, but was originally of very modest proportions. In 1850, Marcellus Clements purchased the 113 acre farm, "McDaniels Resurvey", on which it stood; it is probable that when his daughter Marianna married Robert Edelen in 1855, they expanded this simple vernacular dwelling to serve as their home. Marcellus Clements died in 1859, leaving the farm to his wife, and after her death to their children; it subsequently passed to Robert and Marianna Clements Edelen. It remained the Edelen family home until 1913. After that time, the property changed hands several times, and in 1944 was sold to the Worthy family. James and Octavia Worthy brought up their family in the house, and farmed the land. Eventually they divided their 112-acre farm into smaller parcels for members of their family. In 1966, their son, Walter Worthy, sold a 30-acre parcel, including the house, to the Board of Education, but a school was never built, and the house was left unoccupied. In 1982, the adjoining 20-acre parcel on the east was sold to the Rhodes family; this parcel includes the barns and is presently being farmed. The farm complex, although legally divided, forms a visual landmark along the Accokeek Road.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Edelen house is a two-part gable-roofed frame house set back ca. 1,000 feet north of Accokeek Road in open farmland and accessible by a long unpaved lane. The building is unoccupied and in seriously deteriorated condition; the architectural description was, therefore, written from a distance. The main block of the house is two-bays wide, with entrance in the second bay of the main south facade. Windows are 6/6 double hung sash. A one-story porch which once spanned this south facade has collapsed, obscuring the front door and preventing close inspection. There is a heavy exterior corbelled brick chimney at the west gable end with prominent weatherings. The main block is one-room deep, with passage to the east and parlor to the west; an earlier (1974) description indicates that there was a boxed staircase in the southwest corner of the parlor. The building is covered with white asbestos shingle, and the roof is covered with corrugated tin.

Extending east from the east gable end of the main block is a two-story one-bay wing with a slightly lower roofline than that of the main block. There is an interior brick chimney at the ridge at its east gable end. The 1974 survey describes a boxed staircase in the northwest corner of this one-room wing.

Several hundred feet east of the dwelling is a complex of farm buildings. There is a large gable-roof barn with a central crossgable peak in the roof of the main south facade. The framing is board-and-batten, and the roof is of standing seam tin. At some point the rear (north) plane of its roof was extended, giving it a cat-slide roof configuration. Directly south of this barn is a long low shed. The barns and shed are still functional and presently in use, but the house (essentially unaltered) is deteriorated probably beyond repair. The property is fenced and posted.

The Robert Edelen farm complex represents a small early nineteenth century plantation. The house appears to be an early nineteenth century vernacular dwelling, of end-hall-and-parlor plan, with a small boxed staircase in the corner of the parlor. This dwelling was expanded by the later addition of a one-room wing, but was originally of very modest proportions.

In 1850, Marcellus Clements purchased the 113 acre farm, "McDaniels Resurvey", on which it stood; it is probable that when his daughter Marianna married Robert Edelen in 1855, they expanded this simple vernacular dwelling to serve as their home.<sup>1</sup>

Marcellus Clements died in 1859, leaving the farm to his wife, and after her death to their children; it subsequently passed to Robert and Marianna Clements Edelen.<sup>2</sup> Marianna Edelen died a few years later, and Robert Edelen remarried, apparently bringing up his children by both marriages in this modest farm dwelling. Years later, after the deaths of both Robert Edelen and his second wife, the County Court of Equity had to settle a dispute between the two sets of heirs over the farm property. Rather than attempting to divide the property among the heirs, the Court decreed that the whole farm should be sold; it was purchased in 1913 by one of the children of the second marriage, and immediately resold.<sup>3</sup> After that time, the property changed hands several times, and in 1944 was sold to the Worthy family. James and Octavia Worthy brought up their family in the house, and farmed the land. Eventually they divided their 112-acre farm into smaller parcels for members of their family. In 1966, their son, Walter Worthy, sold a 30-acre parcel, including the house, to the Board of Education, but a school was never built, and the house was left unoccupied. In 1982, the adjoining 20-acre parcel on the east was sold to the Rhodes family; this parcel includes the barns and is presently being farmed. The farm complex, although legally divided, forms a visual landmark along the Accokeek Road.<sup>4</sup>
